FCC Registration and Repair Information

Your AT&T product has been registered with the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) in accordance with Part 68 of its Rules. The FCC requires us to tell you its regulations covering the use of your product.

1. Connection and use with the nationwide telephone network

The FCC requires that you connect your product to the nationwide telephone network through a modular telephone outlet or jack. The modular telephone outlet or jack to which the telephone must be connected is a USOC RJ-11C or RJ-11W.

2. Notification to the telephone company

Before you connect this telephone equipment, the FCC requires that you notify your local telephone company. The telephone number is in the front of your telephone directory.

Tell them:

- The "line" to which you will connect the telephone equipment (that is, your phone number), and
- The telephone equipment's FCC registration number and ringer equivalence number. These numbers are on the back or bottom of your telephone equipment.

The FCC further requires that you notify your local telephone company when permanently disconnecting this telephone equipment.

Under the FCC registration program, you may not connect this telephone equipment to party lines or coin telephone lines.

3. Repair instructions

If you ever have any trouble operating your product, you should first determine if the problem is in your telephone equipment.

In either of the following two situations, the problem probably isn't in your telephone equipment.

1. If you have more than one telephone set and you are experiencing problems with all of them.
2. If you have only one telephone and it works in some modular outlets but not in others. (Plug your telephone into different modular outlets to check).

In either of these cases, your trouble may be in your own customer premises wiring, the local telephone company lines, or the central office equipment.

If you've isolated your telephone equipment as the source of your telephoning problem, call toll free, 1-800-555-8111 for information on obtaining repair service.

4. Rights of the telephone company

If your product is causing harm to the telephone network, the telephone company may temporarily discontinue your telephone service. If possible, they'll notify you before they interrupt service. If advance notice isn't practical, you'll be notified as soon as possible. You'll be given the opportunity to correct the problem, and you'll be informed of your right to file a complaint with the FCC.

Your telephone company may make changes in its facilities, equipment, operations, or procedures that could affect the proper functioning of your AT&T product. If such changes are planned, you'll be notified.

Interference Information Part 15 of FCC Rules

Some telephone equipment generates and uses radio-frequency energy and, if not installed and used properly, may cause interference to radio and TV reception.

Your AT&T product has been tested and found to meet the standards for a Class B computing device, as specified in Subpart J of Part 15 of the FCC Rules. These specifications are designed to provide reasonable protection against such interference in a residential installation. However, there is no guarantee that interference will not occur in a particular installation.

If your AT&T product causes interference to radio or TV reception when it's in use, you might correct the interference with any one or all of these measures:

1. Where it can be done safely, re-orient the receiving TV or radio antenna.
2. Move your TV, radio or other receiver as far away as possible from your telephone equipment.
3. If your telephone product runs on AC power: Plug your product into an AC outlet that's not on the same circuit as one used by your radio or TV.

If you need assistance, contact AT&T consumer sales and service, toll free, on 1-800-555-8111. You may also find this booklet prepared by the FCC helpful: "How To Identify And Resolve Radio-TV Interference Problems." The booklet can be ordered from the U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402; Stock No. 004-000-00345-4.
